This article is about effects of new technology — the Internet.

I'm going to describe its effects on people's lives and explain whether these changes have led to more or less freedom. I'm also going to evaluate how positive these changes are for society.

For me, Internet is a great ^{so} invention, because it helps people with their lives. For example, two people from different countries can become friends and communicate much more easily because of social networking sites the Internet provides. These meetings with new people from other cultures helps people to become more tolerant. Students can search for information faster than without Internet. Internet can also help to resolve some average problems. For example, person can search for a recipe of apple pie or for a nearest cafe.

But most important, Internet can help with finding missing people, or pets. Online maps or just living people from different places can help with findings.

However, Internet also can be a dangerous place. Many people are using Internet, but not all of them are good. Some people are doing "online-fishing" trying to get personal information, passwords and money. And because Internet is mostly anonymous, people got more freedom in their actions. They can ^{and be} ~~be~~ hate ~~put~~, trying to cancel a single person by finding out their phone ~~numbers~~, home address, doing fakes. and ~~saying~~ commenting their every move with "kys".

I would highly recommend to be careful in the internet, cause you can easily met a pedophile. and ~~don't even notice~~.

In the end, I still will say that internet changed society and human lives very much and in positive way in a highly positive way.
